buildings.co.uk. The company, which was established in 1995, builds bespoke timber buildings and constructions such as barns, field shelters and horse jumps, in both softwood and hardwood. DSH has an enviable reputation in the Oxfordshire rural community for its unique designs and high quality construction. The new website provides information for prospective clients and showcases some of DSH's work.

DSH Carpentry and Design Ltd, a regular sponsor of a cross country jump at the Great Tew Horse Trials, is owned and managed by David and Sarah Holland. David Holland is an experienced carpenter who takes a hands-on role in the construction of all the projects undertaken by the company. Sarah Holland, an accomplished scenic artist, is the company's design specialist. Clients are provided with working drawings and artist's impressions or 'renditions' of their bespoke timber building designs. Numbered amongst DSH Carpentry and Design's regular clients is Kilnwood Alpacas, a stud farm and breeders of champion alpacas.

As well as the design and construction of timber buildings, DSH Carpentry and Design also builds and paints stage scenery for theatres across the country. A new dedicated website for this arm of the company is planned, and expected to be live by mid-summer.

DSH Director Sarah Holland comments, "Having a strong Internet presence is really important so people can see how original our work is. So many companies say they provide 'bespoke' timber buildings, but in fact they are standard constructions, just in a different range of sizes. We pride ourselves on listening to our clients and building something which exactly meets their needs and that of their animals".
